A CAPTIVATING TALE INFUSED WITH CELTIC MAGIC, HIGH STAKES, AND TRUE LOVE

In 1820s Ireland, Morrigan Lane is unusual in her desire to captain boats to freedom on the seas but bonded to her people's ancient ways. When called by The Otherworld to use her ancestral wisdom to heal brokenness between humans and their natural world, Morrigan must choose whether to heed the call. To do so threatens those in power, and jeopardizes her life and her love.

“Tears, sighs, fabulous!”

—Geryl White Dreyfous, Academy Award-winning film producer

“A writer should be able to ‘dance with a pen’ according to Nietzsche. Jennifer Comeau passes with flying colors with A Moon in All Things. This work is not formulaic magic realism, but rather reality as magic. This is a generous, warm-hearted, and very well researched novel and the reader will want more.”

—Tom Bancroft, former book critic

Fans of Outlander's Claire Fraser and The Frozen River's Martha Ballard will enjoy Comeau's Morrigan Lane, who is fiercely devoted to discovering her healing gifts while those in power call them “dangerous.”

Jennifer Elwell Comeau was raised on the songs and stories of her indomitable Irish ancestors. This novel honors their legacy. Author of The Inside of ME, a children's book, and creator/songwriter of two records of original music, she works globally on restoring nature-human interconnection. Jen lives in Kennebunkport, Maine.
