WHEN THE WATERS RISE, WHAT WILL YOU HOLD ONTO?

In Inland, Juliet is racing against nature to reach her son Billy, trapped alone outside Boston. As she fights her way north from the flooded Florida Panhandle, Billy eventually leaves their home on a raft, hoping to find safety inland. Separated by hundreds of miles and an unrecognizable world, mother and son each confront the limits of survival, love, and courage in this powerful tale of family resilience.

“Exceptionally well written, this novel is particularly important during the current dramatic changes in climate control that increasingly become more obvious every year.”

—Grady’s Reviews

“Inland is a timely novel that resonates deeply with the challenges of our modern world. Risse’s masterful storytelling makes it a must-read for anyone seeking a gripping tale of survival, resilience, and the unbreakable bonds of family in the face of adversity.”

If readers enjoy the haunting journey of survival in McCarthy’s The Road, the emotional stakes of Station Eleven by St. John Mandel, and the tense, atmospheric suspense of Leave the World Behind by Alan, they will be captivated by Inland, which combines a gripping story of resilience with a deeply personal look at family bonds in a world transformed by rising waters.

Kate Risse teaches Spanish language and culture at Tufts University. She has published articles on the history and culture of Spain and Latin America. She lives in Brookline, Massachusetts, with her family and spends time on Dog Island and in the mountains of Vermont. Inland is her debut novel.
