Leslie Dale Bowman has worked in the visual arts as the director of admissions at the Maine College of Art, a photographer, and a photo editor of Bangor Metro. She has taught on the art faculty of the University of Maine at Machias since the mid-1990s. She lives on a small saltwater farm in eastern Maine, maintaining studios for painting, clay work, and photography. Nature is her companion and inspiration.

William Henry Forester is a poet, folklorist, and storyteller whose work explores the intersections of memory, myth, and the sea. Born in Inverness in the Scottish Highlands, he now lives on the Maine coast with his wife. His writing ranges from poetry and children's tales to coastal mysteries, often reflecting themes of solitude, loss, and the echoes of what we leave behind.

Annaliese Jakimides's work has appeared in print, audio, exhibit, and performance venues nationally and internationally. Nominated for Pushcart Prizes and Best of the Nets, she's been a finalist for many awards, including the Stephen Dunn Poetry Prize and Maine Literary Awards in multiple genres in multiple years. Her poetry and prose have appeared in many magazines (Utne, GQ), journals (Beloit, Consequence), and anthologies (Beacon Press, Golden Books, Seal Press, Henry Holt, Littoral Books, 12 Willows Press, and more). Broadcast on Maine Public and NPR, she's a freelance writer, editor, and facilitator who's worked with environmental justice organizations, international arts groups, and people in prisons. After decades in the woods of northern Maine, she lives in Bangor.

Valerie Lawson has published work in Café Review, About Place Journal, The Catch, Maine Farms, and other outlets. She participated in the Writing the Land project, connecting poets with protected spaces. Before moving to Maine in 2007, she was part of the Boston Poetry Slam and Doc Brown's Traveling Poetry Show. Valerie coedited Off the Coast literary journal and edited 3 Nations Anthology: Native, Canadian & New England Writers (Resolute Bear Press), winner of the Maine Literary Award.

Catherine J.S. Lee continues to celebrate her Downeast Maine home in stories, poems, and photographs. An almost-lifelong island resident familiar with coastal fog, she began writing in first grade and published her first piece at age eight. Her newest collection, A Place to Land: More Stories from the Coast of Maine, was published by Sea Smoke Press in 2025, following her award-winning Island Secrets: Stories from the Coast of Maine (Sea Smoke Press, 2022).

Cynthia Reeves is the author of The Last Whaler and Falling Through the New World—both Foreword INDIES finalists—and Badlands, winner of the Miami University Press Novella Prize. Her poetry and fiction have appeared widely, and she has held residencies with the Arctic Circle, Hawthornden Castle, and the Vermont Studio Center. A graduate of the Warren Wilson MFA program, she has taught at Bryn Mawr and Rosemont College. Now living in Camden, Maine, she draws inspiration from the landscapes of her youth, exploring themes of memory, place, and environmental loss.

Douglas Wright lives in the countryside of Downeast Maine where he works and dreams and writes. douglaswrightiii.com
