Some Waves Destroy. Others Carry You Forward.

A tsunami takes her family. A sudden accident takes his best friend. From opposite sides of the world, a Finnish girl and a boy from San Francisco are drawn together by loss—and by a shared resolve to turn personal tragedy into action. As their lives intersect across continents and years, grief becomes a catalyst rather than an endpoint. Grounded in science, memory, and human connection, Lady of the Waves explores how individual lives are shaped by global forces—and how young people can choose response over despair in a climate-changed world.

A powerful, cross-generational novel about loss, love, and the courage to believe that survival can lead to purpose.

Readers who appreciate the emotionally driven climate narrative of The Light Pirate by Lily Brooks-Dalton, the intimate exploration of grief found in The Sky Is Everywhere by Jandy Nelson, and the sea-shaped lives and resilience portrayed in The Island of Sea Women by Lisa See will be drawn to Lady of the Waves.

Sharon D. Sheltzer is an architect, reader, and author who writes stories for young people that explore resilience and climate action. Her environmental activism, international travel, and work with exchange students inform the global settings of her fiction. Through storytelling, she seeks to connect with readers and show that challenges can be overcome.
