

A Blind Spider

THREE LOBSTERMEN. THREE DROWNINGS. SOMEBODY'S COUNTING.

Moe Claire's Pyke Island Mystery Series has built a loyal following among readers who love coastal New England thrillers rooted in a real sense of place. The series follows geology student Del Corriveau through the hidden tensions of a Downeast Maine fishing community—where the landscape holds clues and the past is never as buried as islanders would like to believe.

A Blind Spider is the fourth book in the series. Readers new to Pyke Island will find it a gripping standalone mystery; longtime fans will recognize how deeply the threads of the earlier books run through this one. The series begins with A Fickle Tide and continues through Granite and Bones and Black Veil, White Rose.

Claire writes with an insider's knowledge of Downeast Maine—its geography, its seasons, and the particular silence of small coastal communities. A Blind Spider is her most ambitious entry in the series, and her sharpest.

“As mystery readers and geologists, the Pyke Island Series hits all the right notes—real Downeast Maine scenery, authentic characters, a touch of geology, and plenty of small town secrets and suspense.”

—Duane and Ruth Braun, authors of Guide to the Geology of Mount Desert Island, The Schoodic Peninsula, and Acadia National Park

Moe Moeller is the author (as Moe Claire) of the Pyke Island Mysteries, set in Downeast Maine, as well as short stories, poetry, and community theater plays. When not writing, she hikes, gardens, sails, enjoys summer and winter in Maine, and volunteers for several local non-profits.
